Individual
Supports

Participate Australia provides a range of individual supports to suit your care needs during the week, on weekends, in the afternoon or in the evening. We believe in providing flexible support that helps you fulfil your aspirations and meet your NDIS goals. We will work with you to achieve this by accessing the community, building independent living skills or by helping you make new friends and gaining skills to be better equipped for further education or employment.

Individual support is extremely important to help you grow and thrive as an individual outside the direct support of family and other carers. This type of support is not only important for personal growth but it enables you to explore your interests independently, resulting in more quality and enjoyable time spent with family and friends.

We can provide staff with specialised training to meet your particular needs, such as cultural preferences, working with challenging behaviours, trained in the use of equipment or the administration of medication etc.

VARIETY THROUGH CHOICE

Participate Australia has over 150 linguistically and culturally diverse, professional direct support staff on hand with a variety of skills and expertise to help you.

Our supports are available to meet your needs at a time and location of your choice; so call us now to book a meeting with one of our highly trained team to discuss your individual requirements.

PERSON CENTRED SUPPORT

Participate Australia has been committed to person centred support for people with disabilities long before it became customary.

The high standard of our work is recognised by government agencies and other providers who frequently broker our services.

We support hundreds of participants and their families in the Sydney region.

We provide more than 220,000 hours of service to our participants on an annual basis.
