Empowered living

Transitional Living and Emergency Accommodation

Participate Australia can provide transitional living and emergency accommodation to support you when the need arises. This assistance is in the form of overnight or emergency accommodation to help if a situation arises where the usual care arrangements cannot be met due to unexpected events. This short term care supports the person with a disability, while new accommodation arrangements are being made.

We also provide transitional living activities, which supports adults with low to moderate support needs in acquiring the skills to live in a communal, semi-supported environment or to move into an independent living arrangement.

Our house is comfortably furnished, fully equipped, accessible and fitted with supporting equipment for participants with complex care needs. Our team is qualified to use all equipment, administer medication and provide first aid.

Participants are encouraged to actively engage in communal living, for example by sharing housekeeping chores, grocery shopping and the preparation of meals. This provides greater stability and also gives participants an opportunity to build skills in communal living and forge friendships.

VARIETY THROUGH CHOICE

Participate Australia has over 150 linguistically and culturally diverse, professional direct support staff on hand with a variety of skills and expertise to help you.

We can provide staff with specialised training to meet your support needs, such as cultural preferences, working with challenging behaviours, trained in the use of equipment or the administration of medication etc.

Our supports are available to meet your needs at a time and location of your choice; so call us now to book a meeting with one of our highly trained team to discuss your individual requirements.

PERSON CENTRED SUPPORT

Participate Australia has been committed to person centred support for people with disabilities long before it became customary.

The high standard of our work is recognised by government agencies and other providers who frequently broker our services.

We support hundreds of participants and their families in the Sydney region.

We provide more than 220,000 hours of service to our participants on an annual basis.
